Experiencing Disturbing Things When You Treat Someone

Hi, Taggart here, from Reiki Evolution. I've been focusing recently on the sort of sensations you or your client might have when giving/receiving Reiki, and in particular what it all means if either you, the practitioner, or the recipient, don't seem to feel too much, or anything at all, happening during a treatment.

Now I'd like to talk about the issue of definitely noticing something happening when you treat, but it's not a great experience!

Now this is an uncommon happening in my experience, and most Reiki treatments that you will give will be lovely, blissful occasions, but it isn't always like that and there are a few things to say about what unpleasant sensations or experiences might mean, and I also want to deal with the issue of "picking things up" from the person you are working on.

There are quite a few things to say about this.

You can read my thoughts by clicking the link below:

I hope you find this article interesting and helpful.

Best wishes,

Taggart :)
